What's On

Studying Music at ANU

10am – 10.20am

Lectorial Room 1, RSSS (Building 146)

If you have a passion for music, come along to this presentation and discover what makes studying music at ANU so special. Our program fosters artistry by offering a diversity of musical experiences in an environment that encourages excellence, passion, and entrepreneurship. It provides students with a unique 21st-century musical experience, including the opportunity to specialise in music practice or contemporary music production.

School of Music Building Tour

11am - 12pm | 12pm - 1pm | 2pm - 3pm

Meet: University Ave Lawns, University Ave

The School of Music at ANU is the place to go for the discovery and exploration for all things musical. The School of Music recording studio is the cornerstone of the school's vision as the world's leading 21st century music school. The School's programs develop both standalone and integrated skills in performance, composition, recording, production, and music scholarship.

During Open Day, walk over and take a tour of the building and facilities at the School of Music at ANU. You will get to meet music academic staff while touring the School of Music's world class facilities, including Llewellyn Hall, the Keyboard Institute and the Recording Studio. Each tour has a maximum capacity of 20 participants.

Q&A with School of Music Academics

11am – 12pm & 12pm – 1pm

Biginelli's Cafe, Level 5, School of Music
(Building 100)

Are you interested in studying music at university? Join us in an informal Q&A session with academics at the School of Music Cafe. Situated in the heart of the nation's capital, and on the campus of Australia's foremost research university, the Australian National University School of Music has a proud and rich history. It was the first purpose-built music school facility in Australia and for nearly 50 years the School has also played a leading role in the cultural life of Canberra and our region.

Music Technology and Music for Film and Video Games

1pm - 2pm

Pro Tools Lab, Level 5, School of Music
(Building 100)

This workshop offers an introductory overview of film and game composition, covering digital audio workstations (DAWs), MIDI orchestration, sample libraries, and sound design. Participants will explore how music enhances storytelling across both linear and interactive media. This session is open to anyone interested in the creative and technical aspects of music production, film scoring, and game audio.

Music Production

1pm - 2pm

Recording Studio, Level 5, School of Music
(Building 100)

This workshop offers a behind-the-scenes look at how a large-format recording studio functions. Participants will discover the fundamentals of studio equipment, learn how sound is captured, and understand the various roles involved in the music recording process.
